	Claims	2, 3	NO

2. Citations and explanations

Reference is made to the following documents:

D1: DE 199 35 527 A (GIESECKE & DEVRIENT GMBH) 8 February 2001 (2001-02-08)

D2: DE 33 38 597 A (GAO GES AUTOMATION ORG) 2 May 1985 (1985-05-02)

D1, which is considered the closest prior art, discloses a substrate for an electronic device with organic components from which the subject matter of claim 1 differs in that an electrode layer of an organic component is also a printed conductor layer of a baseplate for a conventional semiconductor element.

The subject matter of claim 1 is therefore novel (PCT Article 33(2)).

The problem addressed by the present invention can therefore be considered that of producing a printed circuit board in which organic components are integrated and which is as easy as possible to produce.

The solution to this problem proposed in claim 1 of the present application involves an inventive step for the following reasons (PCT Article 33(3)): none of the present documents suggests doing without a "conventional" printed conductor and using an already present electrode layer instead.

Claims 4-11 are dependent on claim 1 and therefore likewise meet the PCT requirements of novelty and inventive step.

Claims 2 and 3 do not contain the characterising feature of claim 1 (use of the electrode layer as a printed conductor layer). The subject matter of the claims is already disclosed in D1, and the claims are therefore not novel (PCT Article 33(2)). Furthermore, these claims do not meet the requirement of unity of invention either.

Further observations:

- Claim 1 is not correctly delimited over the prior art.
- The claims lack reference signs.
- The expression "good value" in claim 7 is not a technical feature.
